What is a Digital Language Lab and why do you need one?

Digital Language Labs are easy-to-use, interactive software-driven platforms that provide all the prerequisites for acquiring foreign language proficiency efficiently, quickly and cost-effectively. Teacher-student communication is one-on-one and is customizable to individual student needs.

In a traditional foreign language-learning classroom setting, the tendency is to have a "one-size-fits-all" approach where classes are conducted in groups and taught usually by a non-native speaker of the language. This style of teaching is often detrimental to motivating the student in acquiring communicative proficiency in the language. Sometimes, it may even lead to a lack of self-confidence in one's ability to speak the language with confidence.

How does the OréllTalk Language Lab work?

OréllTalk allows learners to do educational tasks such as listen to audio recordings, test their vocabulary and learn grammar rules. Teachers can closely monitor every student activity individually and as a class. This enables them to help students more effectively. All four language skills "speaking, listening, reading, and writing" are emphasized in communicative language lab classrooms. One hallmark of a communicatively oriented language lab classroom is the frequent use of pair and small-group activities.

- | | |
|---|--|
|  Teacher can communicate one-on-one with individual students in private |  Hold group discussions and debates |
|  Bring weaker students up to speed with the rest of the class quickly |  Reduces anxiety, especially for shy and inhibited students |
|  Role-play helps students acquire accents and mannerisms |  Instant scoring features motivate students |
